CIA Urged to Tell Who Performed Tests on Mind

Associated Press

In the 1950s and 1960s, the Central Intelligence Agency tried to learn more about brainwashing. Now the CIA is being asked to tell who participated in its research.

U.S. District Court Judge Louis F. Oberdorfer yesterday gave the CIA until Oct. 1 to either reveal the list or give legal reasons why it should not be forced to provide it.

Oberdorfer suggested the CIA contact researchers involved in the so-called MK-ULTRA project and determine whether they objected to release of their names.

John Cary Sims, an attorney for Ralph Nader's Public Citizen Litigation Group, and Dr. Sydney M. Wolfe, head of the Health Research Group, brought the court suit to obtain release of the CIA documents.
